Passing the Torch Through the Arts

"We put a pulse in American History!"

Nina's Fire, work in progress professional staged reading-Albany 2014

For Immediate Release: "Nina's Fire"

Passing the Torch Through the Arts presents a staged reading of Nina's Fire, an original musical about the Triangle Shirtwaist Fire of 1911. The November 15 and 16, 2014 production includes historic material, live music and a discussion afterword.

This play has been work shopped over the last two years in venues throughout the Hudson Valley and NYC. It was first performed at an International Women's Day event in 2011 in Honor of the 100th Anniversary of this tragic event in American History. Although the play chronicles the tragedy, and the criminal negligence that caused it, it also heralds the spirit of American resistance that has formed our nation.

"Great movements start with one stubborn visionary, that doggedly struggles for the rights of us all, often fighting against great odds and even greater personal cost. But without these people, and the scores of their faceless and nameless supporters, there would be no America as we know it, at least not one that I am proud to live in." Michael Monasterial, playwright and founder of Passing the Torch Through the Arts.

NOVEMBER
15th & 16th

Albany, NY

On Sat November 15 at 7pm and Sunday November 16 at 5 pm at the Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit located at 57 Hurlbut St. in Albany, NY 12209.

Because this play is a work in Progress, we welcome feedback during the discussion after the reading.

All actors, musicians, and technical staff are paid. We will be charging a $10 (suggested donation) to cover expenses and to raise funds for our free acting school scheduled to open in Spring 2015.

"Delightful, interesting, thought provoking...moving, everything you come to Historical theater to enjoy!"
